FIGHTING AT RIGA

Teutons Are Pushed Back And Centers Are Won By Letts

(Reuter's Service)

London, October 18.—Although the report of the fall of Petrograd is still unconfirmed, the capture of Gatchina, Krasnoe-Selo and Krasnaja-Gorka leaves General Yudenitch's road to the capital no longer barred by fortresses. Meanwhile the Letts are turning the tables on the Germans at Riga. They have captured in a fierce battle Denamuende, and Balderoa and have taken many prisoners and considerable booty, Allied cruisers taking part in the operations. The Germans continue to bombard Riga.

OPINION IN LONDON

London, October 19.—Naval and Military circles in London persist in considering reports concerning the surrender of Kronstadt merely as an intelligent anticipation, but admit that Petrograd is so closely invested that little short of a miracle can save the capital.

The capture of Catchina and Krasnoe Selo is admitted by the Bolshevists, while the War Office states that the Esthonians co-operating with General Judenitch are within four miles of Krasnaya Gorka, facing Kronstadt.

DENIKIN ADVANCING

A Tragedy At Ichowfu

(China Press Correspondence)

ICHOWFU, Shantung, Oct. 18.—Last July several students at the local government school formed an anti-opium society, as owing to the apathy of the local official, himself a large consumer of the drug, a large majority of the shops in the city are dealing openly in Japanese opium which comes to us via Tsingtau and Tsingkou.

Shortly after the formation of the society, it was decided to make an example of one of the most prominent merchants. Five of the members of the society made a raid on the shop, found opium in abundance on the shelves, and, tying his hands behind his back and placing a white cap on his head, led the proprietor through the streets. This, naturally, created quite a little excitement, and the shopkeeper and his friends swore vengeance. Warrants for the arrest of the students were issued, but only four of the five could be located, the fifth having left for parts unknown. Considerable money was spent in trying to find him, but without avail.

Thursday evening our servants were startled by hearing cries of "save my life," but true to custom they thought of number one first and did nothing. The next morning we found the body of a man mutilated in a most horrible manner lying just a few feet from our compound wall. It was identified as that of the missing student. All day long the body lay on the road surrounded by a crowd of the morbidly curious. When asked to have it removed and buried, the official stated that it could not be done until the perpetrators of the crime had been located.

Remarks of some of the students at the government school indicated that they knew something of the matter. Several of them were put through the third degree with the result that the blame was placed on the four boys who had taken part in the opium raid. Two were immediately captured and confessed a part in mutilating the corpse, but said the actual deed was done by one of the teachers of the school. It seems that when these four boys were punished by the official, for their part in the opium raid, they consulted with the teacher as what to do with their former comrade who had refused to face the music, and they were advised to "get even" at the first opportunity.

The two boys who were caught were given a hearing this morning. They were found guilty, and the relatives of the deceased were given the privilege of determining the sentence. After a consultation, the boy's old grandmother, a woman of eighty years arose and in a voice and manner which were dramatic to the extreme, announced that a can of oil was to be poured over their clothes and set afire. Sentence has not yet been carried out. Great excitement prevails in the city, and the tragedy is the one topic of conversation.

Purposes Of League Told By Secretary Lansing

Its Rejection, He Says, Will Defeat Efforts To Attain Unity Of Purpose Among Nations

(American Press Wireless)

New York, October 21.—All efforts to obtain a unity of purpose among the nations of the world with a view of avoiding international conflicts in the future will be discouraged if the United States fails to adopt the League of Nations in its present form, Robert I. Lansing, Secretary of State, declared before the meeting of the board of regents of the University of New York. For this, if for no other reason, the League should not be rejected, the Secretary said.

"If every nation were as democratic in reality as is the republic of the United States," Secretary Lansing asserted, "universal peace would be an accomplished fact and not only a state toward which the world is looking with longing eyes striving to devise methods by which it may be obtained. Until democracy does become a standing policy of all civilisation other means must be employed to insure the continuation of the world in a state of international peace.

Carnegie Simpson offered the Church Congress the greetings of Presbyterians. He declared that if some practical step towards reunion was not taken within a reasonable time reaction might arise among the Nonconformist Churches.

Peking Offers Bonds To Pay For Loss Of Steamer Kiangkwan

Government Securities Valued At $800,000 Is Amount Of Settlement Proposed

News reached Shanghai yesterday that the Peking Government has offered the sum of $800,000 in government bonds for the indemnification of the ill-fated Kiangkwan to the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, owners of the vessel. The offer is made as the result of the appeal taken by the owners following the judgment against them rendered by the Naval Court, which sat here for almost a year to conduct an inquiry into the sinking of the vessel, alleged to have been rammed by the Hupeh Government gun-boat Chutsai before sinking near Hankow a year ago last April. The British Consulate-General recently presented a protest against the manner in which the case was handled.

The offer was made, it is understood, through Mr. Sung Pao-chi, a director of the company and a former Minister of Finance. While no definite acceptance has been announced, it is expected that the board of directors at its next meeting will agree on an amount and bargain with the Peking ministry.

Peking however is offering the sum with the threat that it would withdraw this offer and pay no indemnity if the company refuses to accept it now.

DISMISSAL OF PUPILS CAUSES SCHOOL STRIKE

Ellis Kadoorie Boys Demand Four Be Re-Instated; Explanation Issued

Because of the dismissal of four pupils Tuesday, the boys of the Ellis Kadoorie Public School for Chinese, 1 Shanhaikwan Road, have declared a strike and established pickets. Fully one-half of the pupils failed to attend yesterday.

A letter issued by the Ellis Kadoorie branch of the Shanghai Students' Union says that the four were dismissed for being absent on Monday, Confucius' birthday, and that in addition the headmaster, Mr. R. G. Dowie, caned a number of pupils.

An explanation was made yesterday by one of the city's educational officials concerning the trouble. It arose, he stated, over the refusal of the headmaster to accede to a request from three of the pupils that he grant a holiday. It was a matter for the Municipal Council to pass upon, he announced, and until that body acted there could be no holiday. Thereupon four of the pupils absented themselves and, when they gave no excuse other than they had chosen to take a holiday, they were dismissed for insubordination. Denial is made that a number of pupils were caned. One who laughed when being reprimanded was so punished, but that was all.

The Municipal Council does not recognise the Students Union and therefore the school authorities will give no heed to that organisation's ultimatum demanding "a favorable reply before October 27."

The enrollment of the school is 352 and the attendance yesterday morning was 150 and in the afternoon 200.

CANTON DELEGATE SAYS NORTH WILL OPEN OFFENSIVE

Peking, He Declares, Has Money And Arms And Will Use Them

ACTION IN SOUTH

Strengthening Militarists And President May Be Chosen

LOOKS TO WEST

Believed Szechuen Will Be Theater Of Conflict When It Opens

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Canton, October 22.—At a joint session of the National Assembly yesterday it was resolved to reorganise the Military Government. A committee was appointed to draft a bill providing for such reorganisation, the result of which will probably be the abolition of the posts of the seven Military Directors and the election of a president.

It is expected that Lu Ying-ting will be elected president. The general opinion is that this reorganisation will not improve matters, but will simply strengthen the militarists, who already control the situation.

OFFENSIVE EXPECTED

That the North will be the first to assume an aggressive attitude following the deadlock of peace is the belief expressed by Mr. Tang Shao-yi, Southern peace delegate, when interviewed yesterday by a reporter of THE CHINA PRESS. Mr. Tang thinks that Mr. Wang Yi-tang, the Northern peace delegate, will not leave Shanghai for the present and believes that there will be armed conflict in China with the North on the offensive and the South on the defensive.

"This will be the most disastrous of things for China," Mr. Tang asserted, "but Peking has the money and the arms and will resort to them when the South holds out."

Mr. Tang is firm on his original eight demands and sees no prospect for peace.

The Southern delegate foresees disastrous clashes in Szechuen, on which, he said, the North will now concentrate its efforts in its attempt to penetrate Yunnan and Shensi. The North will not attack Kwangtung, because Peking believes that Kwangsi will be non-committal when hostilities are resumed. General Liu Chunghou, the Northern Tuchun in Szechuen, who was ousted by General Hsiung Keh-wu will take an active part in the campaign, it is expected.

SITUATION DEADLOCKED

Since the refusal of Mr. Tang to see the representatives of Mr. Wang Yi-tang Saturday there have been no developments in the peace negotiations in Shanghai. Mr. Tang stands firm and will not recognise the publication of any secret treaties or loan agreements as authentic unless they are published under the seal of the Peking Government.

"It is the easiest thing in the world for Peking to deny these treaties," said Mr. Tang. "They can be published. Then if Obata calls on the Minister of Foreign Affairs and wants to know how the documents leaked out, Peking will very courteously say that it knew nothing about it and will tell the world that no such treaties ever existed."

Commenting on the proposal of three of the Northern delegates, Messrs. Wang Yu-ling, Wang Ko-ming and Sze Yu, to negotiate directly with the Southern peace delegation without the presence of either chief delegate, Mr. Tang expressed the opinion that there will be little success.

"What we want is a permanent peace," said Mr. Tang, "not a peace which will just enable the North to make more loans. While it is hoped that the powers will stop lending to Peking, it is a fact that Peking is getting at least $10,000,000 a month. Where does all this money go? The administrative expenses will require less than half of the amount."

SECRETARIAT GETS SEAL

As a result of Mr. Tang's refusal to accept the seal of the Southern chief delegate which was sent here Sunday, Mr. Frank Lee, the custodian of the seal, yesterday received instructions from Canton to hand over the seal to the secretariat of the Southern peace delegation.

Asked who will be his probable successor, Mr. Tang said that it will be difficult for the nominee of the Canton Government to pass the old Parliament and expressed doubt whether the Southern delegation would have a head for some time yet.

Mr. Tang expressed dissatisfaction with the action of certain Southern leaders in sending representatives directly to Peking to negotiate for peace. He said he had no complaint to make before May 13 when he had the plenipotentiary power, but since then a change has taken place.

"Several emissaries have been in Peking," said Mr. Tang, "some offering eight peace terms, others twelve. You never know who they represent and the men who sent them can always deny having done so when trouble arises."

Another Southern peace delegate, Mr. Tseng Yen, expects to leave Shanghai for Canton shortly in view of the deadlock. Five secretaries of the Northern peace delegation left here for Peking yesterday morning.

PLAN HIGHWAY TO LINK PEKING AND TIENTSIN

Proposed Motor Road To Be 55 Miles Long Over Old Overland Route

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, October 18.—The motor highway between Tientsin and Peking, of which there has been much discussion since the Fall of 1917, has now good prospects of being constructed in the near future. At a meeting of the Tientsin Motor Club, Hsiung Hsi-ling informed the members that he and Wang Ta, the mayor of Peking, had already contracted with the Banque Industrielle de Chine for a loan of $150,000 for the construction of a highway connecting Tientsin and Tunghsien at which latter place the American Red Cross Highway to Peking begins.

The contemplated new road will be about 55 miles long and will run almost parallel to the Peking-Mukden Railway, following closely the old Overland Route. The road will be 21 feet wide and will be raised about two feet above the level of the ground. In many places it will be necessary to make only slight repairs to the old Overland Highway, while in other places the stone foundations of the old road will have to be broken up and rolled in level.

Four bridges are contemplated for the new road, and the erection of these will be financed by the Banque Industrielle from the fund set aside for the construction of the Peking Tramway System. Stations probably will be erected along the line of the road at intervals of from 6 to 9 miles, and here repair facilities, gasolene supplies and buffet restaurants will be provided.

The upkeep of the road will be met in part by a tax to be levied on car-owners at the rate of one dollar per trip, and it is planned to ask for voluntary annual contributions from dealers in motor-cars and gasolene merchants. Mr. Hsiung Hsi-ling, Mr. Wang Ta and the other supporters of the highway plan are confident that the opportunity that it will give motorists for making a quick journey between Peking and Tientsin will result in a great boom in the sale of cars; hence they believe that dealers in cars and motor accessories will be able to contribute heavily to the maintenance of the highway.

China Political Notes From Chinese Press

The Chinese ministers to the various foreign countries have telegraphically communicated their disapproval of the new Consortium, asking the government to be careful in the negotiations.

General Hsu Shu-cheng, has decided to proceed to Urga, leaving Peking on the 18th inst.

MONGOLS MAY YIELD AUTONOMY TO CHINA

Action Inspired By Fear Of Invasion Of Russians; Conference Called

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, October 18.—According to Chen Yi, the Chinese Resident at Urga, the Outer Mongolian Government, acting under the influence of the Living Buddha, will call a conference of dukes and bannermen on November 1 for the purpose of discussing the question of autonomy. Chen Yi reports that the Mongolians are in such fear of a possible invasion of their country by Semenoff that they are willing to cancel the autonomy clause in the Tripartite Agreement and come under the control of China once more. The only condition that they are likely to make is that China shall pledge herself to treat them well and to take upon herself the loans that the Outer Mongolian Government has contracted from China and Japan.

Private foreign advices from Outer Mongolia confirm Chen Yi's statements in so far as they concern the fear that the Outer Mongolians entertain for Semenoff. All foreign authorities agree that the Mongolians do not like the Chinese, but that their dislike for the Russians is equally great. Furthermore, the Mongolians do not fear the Chinese, but are afraid of the Russians, who in their eyes are represented by Semenoff and his policies. Hence it is thought probable that the Mongolians will be willing after their conference to come back under the wing of China, on conditions. In this event the matter will be up to China; if she is willing to give the Mongolians a large share of self-government, if she will pay Mongolia's debts, and if she is prepared to refrain from overtaxing the natives of the country, she will get back without a blow the territory over which she lost a large measure of control during the days of the Romanoffs.

The Opera

Last night Miss Burskaya repeated her great performance in "Carmen." The house at the rise of the curtain was very poor indeed. Later more seats were filled as there had been evidently a misunderstanding and some misinformation about the change of time. As stated in this column yesterday, the performances at the old time 9:15 commence today, Thursday.

The opera was as well done as on Friday. The chorus in Act I, and that with the toreador were very good. Miss Sasonova, as Micaela, was most attractive in her part in the third act. Mr. Ulianoff made a fine toreador as before.

The tenor Mr. Preobragensky acts and sings consistently in the various works with a fine sense of the dramatic, never overdone. Better houses at the later hour should be expected.

Tonight the opera of Lakme by Delibes will be repeated.

At The Apollo

An unusual picture of five parts entitled "Zongar, the Dare-Devil of Romance" will be screened commencing tonight at the Apollo Theater. George Larkin, the star of the film, is known as the dare-devil of pictures and Grace Davidson, a real "find" in pictures, plays opposite Larkin.

The picture was made under supervision of Bernarr Macfadden, noted physical culturist of New York. It is full of thrills. The story of the play is simple but sensational. Two women struggle on the edge of a cliff, both fall into the river and are rescued by Zongar, who dives in for them. Later Zongar appears on the deck of a ship where he engages the entire crew in furious fight. His rescue of the heroine from the villain's automobile by aeroplane and the auto's destruction conclude the story.

The one reel comedy, Lonesome Luke in "Si Senor," and the regular Pathe American Gazette form the other part of the program.

CHINA M. E. CONFERENCE AT HUCHOW IS NOTABLE

Bishop Lambuth Is Presiding Officer At 34th Annual Mission Sessions

(China Press Correspondence)

Huchow, October 20.—The 34th annual session of the China Mission Conference, M. E. Church, So. has just been held in this city. From the point of view of number of delegates, representatives from the home church, and work accomplished, this has been probably the most notable conference in the history of the Southern Methodist work in China. On this occasion the conference was fortunate in having as presiding officer, Bishop W. R. Lambuth, who was not only born in China but is able to understand and speak the Chinese language, and therefore is in a position to counsel wisely and plan effectually as no previous visiting bishop was ever able to do. Another advantage at this time was that the two foreign secretaries of the home church, Dr. E. H. Rawlings, and Miss Mabel Howell, were present and took an active share in the work.

The conference was formally opened on Wednesday morning, October 15, by Bishop Lambuth with an address in Chinese, and the regular program then entered upon. The forenoons were given up to routine business, the afternoons devoted to committee meetings, and the evenings to rallies, held by the Women's Missionary Society, the Epworth League and the various organisations connected with the church.

An important feature of the conference was the inspiring addresses given by Dr. Rawlings, who, coming directly from the Centenary Campaign in the United States, where $53,000,000 was pledged by the church for missionary work, urged upon the Chinese church its duty and its opportunity at this time of adopting similar methods of organisation, consecration, and prayer, and in China beginning and carrying to completion a great forward movement. Miss Howell also made several addresses bringing to the conference the same message of the necessity for advance.

The conference also heard addresses by the Rev. E. C. Lobenstine and Dr. Cheng of the China Continuation Committee, who came to explain the plans of the Interchurch Movement for increased evangelistic efforts throughout China, and to ask the M. E. Church, So. to cooperate.

Sunday was the great day of the conference in popular estimation. Six services were held; nearly 500 people partook of the Lord's supper; a packed audience of a thousand, chiefly men, listened to Rev. Van Tz-me of Shanghai, who spoke on the "Need of a New Literature for New Times," and to Mr. Dzau of the Shanghai Chinese Y.M.C.A., who spoke on the "Wonders of the Twentieth Century." During the day nineteen men were ordained to the offices of deacon or elder.

On Monday three sessions were held. Mr. Strother of the National Chinese Christian Endeavor Society addressed the conference, asking it to unite its Epworth League Societies with the Christian Endeavor movement. A sympathetic reply was given, and a committee appointed to consider means for accomplishing the desired result. A resolution was passed, directing that a letter be written to the officers of the World's Sunday School Union, stating that if the World's Sunday School Convention should be held in Tokio no delegates from the Southern Methodist Mission would attend.

The subject of the deplorable condition of some of the widows and orphans of local preachers was presented to the conference and excited general sympathy. A collection of $510.00 was raised to relieve the present distress, to which sum Dr. Rawlings promised to add a like amount from the home board, making a total of $1,020.00.

The conference closed at 11 p.m. with the reading of the appointments for the coming year, very few changes being announced.

Peking News Notes

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, October 18.—Wellington Koo, who will take charge of the Chinese Delegation at Paris after the departure of Minister Lu Tseng-hsiang, has cabled to Peking requesting that Li Chia-ao be sent to France to assist him. At the Ministry of Foreign Affairs it is regarded as likely that Mr. Li, who is now Chinese High Commissioner to Siberia, will be detached from his present work and sent to Paris to join Wellington Koo; Mr. Li has had more diplomatic experience than almost any other Chinese official now in active service, and it is felt here that his assistance will be invaluable at Paris.

Acting Premier Chin Yun-peng has requested that he be relieved of his concurrent post as Director of the Training Department of the National Defense Bureau, and the Government has decided to grant this request in order that General Chin may have more time to devote to the ever-increasing duties of the premiership. General Tuan Chi-kuei, a brother of Marshal Tuan and at present commanding the precautionary forces in and about Peking is looked upon as the most likely candidate for the vacancy to be created by Chin's resignation.

Although Yang Yi-teh's resignation as Chief of Police at Tientsin has not yet reached the Government the opinion in Tientsin is that he cannot delay resigning much longer; and indeed the question of his successor is being freely discussed. Two candidates are mentioned for the post, Chang Yu-tung who acted as Chief of Police during Yang's period of enforced retirement, and Admiral Wu Chiu-fang, Director of the Taku Dockyard and of the Pei Yang Iron Works and Deputy to the Haiho River Conservancy.

Of the two men Admiral Wu is thought by competent judges to have the better chance in spite of his lack of experience in police administration. His record as a public official has been good and he is regarded as tactful enough to steer a middle course between the popular movement and the Government reactionaries. Chang Yu-tung has also steered straight in official life, and things went smoothly in Tientsin under his administration; but the Japanese will, it is believed, object to his appointment.

You want more than weather protection.
The advantage of "Weatherproof Compo" roofing is that it not only gives complete weather protection, but that it gives protection from sparks and embers.
"Weatherproof," means protection in the fullest sense of the word—protection from the elements, protection from sparks, protection from cold and heat, and protection from roof expense. "Weatherproof" is the most economical type of roof you can buy, both in first cost and maintenance. And it costs less to lay—no skilled labor is required.
So many thousands know the advantages of "Weatherproof" that it takes the largest roofing mills in the world to supply the demand.

For a less expensive roofing we recommend "Scout" roofing as the best roofing at the price charged.
This roofing is not offered as the highest quality made but longer service may be expected of it than is usual with low priced roofing. The saturation is asphalt. It is slow drying and does not affect the taste nor ODOR of water. No coal tar is used.

"The Life and Letters of Theodore Watts-Dunton," by Thomas Hake and Arthur C. Bi[illegible]

My "Little Bit." By Marie Corelli. New York: George H. Doran Company.

Miss Corelli's many readers in America know with what skill and force and effect she can use her pen in the writing of fiction, but heretofore they have had little opportunity to acquaint themselves with her equal power in other kinds of writing. But now, in this collection of war essays, they will find that she displays in this kind of prose, wherein the presentation of fact and argument take the place of imagination, the same sweeping eloquence, the same emotional power, the same skill in presuasive statement that they are already familiar with in her fiction. Two of the essays, noteworthy for their sensing of approaching calamity, antedated the war by a year or two. The first one, "Savage Glory," although its date is away back in February, 1913, when it appeared in an English magazine, is still of living interest, and will remain so until the covenant of the League of Nations becomes an accomplished fact. "If war," she says, "is still to confirm us and other nations as Savages, we must behave accordingly." And she concludes: "But when we can get rid of our Savagery, we shall lay down our arms. We shall realise that Civilisation means Unity; Unity in all high purpose and progress toward the betterment of mankind." The other pre-war essay is called "The Great Unrest," and makes a study of the restlessness, in all phases, its causes and its significance, that characterised civilisation in the years before the war. "It needs no gift of prophecy," she says in this article, "and no special intuition to see that we are on the brink of some tremendous change in the destinies of the human race."

There are nearly fifty of the essays written during the war, all of them to further war purposes, and published by the author without recompense as part of her contribution to her country's need. They vary in length from a page or two to fifteen or twenty pages, while the themes include a great variety of subjects upon which a talented pen might aid the general need. An eloquent, inspiring appeal to the women of Britain to devote themselves still more to the cause of the war, and a tribute to Canada and the soldiers she sent. An appeal for starving Belgium was written at the request of Herbert Hoover and published very generally in American papers. An article on "The World's Greatest Need," which a subtitle aptly describes as "an appeal to the sanity of Governments," is well worth sober reading and thought at this time when, in at least one Government, the future of the world is still hanging by a thread. The answer to the question, "Is All Well with England?" is chiefly devoted to discussion of the menace of German commercialism as about to take the place of German militarism. There is vigorous sarcasm, worth reading at any time for its biting humor, in a short article on "The Potato 'Scream,'" wherein Miss Corelli uses a stiletto upon her fellow-citizens with grace and force. In one narrative she tells the true story of how it happened that she was brought into court during the war on the charge of hoarding sugar, an event that was widely reported in American papers at the time. She shows how absurd the action was, discloses its animus and, incidentally, brings out that sharp-pointed stiletto of hers, which she can handle so vigorously, for the benefit of a number of people connected with the affair. Even her friend, Sir Thomas Lipton, does not get off without a stinging touch or two.

DEEP WATERS

Deep Waters. By W. W. Jacobs. Illustrated, Charles Scribner's Sons.

Many of the tales collected in this new volume entitled "Deep Waters" are told by the night watchman. He is a retired sailorman, in charge of a pier, who does not take his duties so seriously as to permit them to interfere with his visits to that attractive public house called the Bear's Head. One or two of his stories are concerned with the doings of his friends, but most of them relate various haps and mishaps of his own. The unlucky Sam Small of "Shareholders," who always managed to get into trouble whenever he came ashore, has the place of honor in the book. He was a sailorman, and "a sailorman is like a fish; he is safest when 'e's at sea," says the night watchman, who frequently proved in his own person the truth of his contention. "Sam's Ghost" gave him many anxious moments, and "Paying Off" proved very expensive, but neither of these could be compared for an instant with the trial of having a woman mistake him for her long-[illegible] be increased if his American namesake would be half as amusing with his "deepness" and subtlety as this Dartmoor Philander, whose innocent machinations keep the reader smiling from the moment of his entrance into the tale. For he is what the politicians call "a smooth article," and his crafty manipulation of people is what they sometimes describe as "smooth as silk." If Philander Knox had been created by E. Phillips Oppenheim instead of Eden Phillpotts he would have been the smoothest and most successful diplomat of high international politics to be found anywhere in fiction. The reader might lament that his creator did not give him a wider and more brilliant sphere for the exercise of his diplomatic talents than the Dene Paper Mill and the furtherance of his own matrimonial wishes if he were not so successful and amusing in this narrow circle in his efforts to still the storm in that teacup which Modora Dingle had created by her scheme to elope with Jordan Kellock. He is one of the best drawn characters in the story, and by far the most interesting and entertaining of them all.

Notwithstanding the many novels Mr. Phillpotts has written with the valley of the Dart or Dartmoor as their backgrounds, he has not yet lost his power of enchanting the reader with their beauty and their witchery. One feels his love for them and his delight in them even in the words with which he paints their beauties. This new story is scened near the Dart, and all its action is framed by the hills and valleys running down to the tidal waters of the river. Brilliant and sparkling with color and enchantment does Mr. Phillpotts make all that frame as he describes the immediate background of each scene in a sentence, or a paragraph, or a page. The ardent feeling with which he unfailingly inspires these bits of glowing description is one of the charms by which Mr. Phillpotts wins and holds his readers. They never tire of visualising, as he never tires of describing, these lovely landscapes. Here is a paragraph from the second page of "Storm in a Teacup" which shows how profound is his love for all the region of the Dart:

> Worthy of worship in all her times and seasons; by her subtleties and sleights, her sun and shadow; by her laughter and coy approaches; by her curves and colors; her green hills and delight of woods and valleys; by her many voices; her changing moods and little lovelinesses, Dart is all Devon and so incomparably England.

"Storm in a Teacup" is another of the series of novels in which Mr. Phillpotts has set out to describe in living, dramatic fashion the industrial life of England. As he has previously imbedded in realistic romance the life and industry of the quarrying of slate, the making of pottery, the growing and picking of hops, so here he evolves a novel out of the lives and work of those engaged in the art of paper making. Practically all the characters work in some capacity in Dene Paper Mill, where the art of producing hand-made paper is carried on with zeal, with pride in their skill and pleasure in its product, by all of the hundreds of workers engaged in it, from the master of the establishment to the sorters of the rags. By slow, short steps the reader is carried through all the processes, from the first appearance of the rags to the final finishing of the sheets of paper. And if he has read attentively, without skipping, when he reaches the last page he will have as clear and comprehensive an understanding of the making of hand-made paper as if he had himself gone through such an establishment with a guide to explain each process. But this phase of the story is never tedious, for each operation is made the background for part of the action or a setting for one of the characters and becomes an integral part of the story itself.

The central idea of the story is the capricious action of a pretty but vain young woman who takes it into her head to imagine that she is not happy with her husband, although they are surprisingly well mated, and that she would be much happier as the wife of another and more intellectual man who had also courted her but had been rejected. It takes much scheming, much imagining, and much pretending to herself and others before she convinces the other man that she is wretchedly abused and that it is his duty to rescue her from a deplorable fate. How she finally carried her scheme through, how she and the other man went away to London together, and what happened when they went back to Dene Paper Mill Mr. Phillpotts tells in a leisurely way, in a story that is entertaining and often amusing. There is much skill in the working out of the characters, of whom there are a very great number, each of them highly individualised. Most of them, when they get a chance, are inordinate talkers and emit, through Mr. Phillpotts's pen, a tiresome amount of unnecessary gabble. It is difficult to imagine real people anywhere, of any sort or condition, talking so many mere words and at such length as do most of these people at every opportunity. Mr. Phillpotts would have done better to blue pencil most of their conversation with the greatest severity.

THE STARLING

Starling. By Juliet Wilbor Tompkins. Indianapolis: Bobbs Merrill Co.

This book has something of the quality which the heroine's novel, "Dickory Dock," must have possessed. And we have no sympathy with the horrid reviewer in the story who began his critique of Sarah Cawthorne's novel with the forbidding words: "Another happy little stranger is in our literary midst. . . . " We believe in "Dickory Dock" because we believe in Sarah, a thoroughly delightful lady, delightful because she has spent her life behind "the hedge" and takes such a childlike joy in the things other people take for granted. It is a tribute to the author's intuition of male psychology that both the men in the story who are in love with Sarah are in love with her because she has spent her life immured, and neither of them wants to break down the hedge. Only they both want the hedge to remain up for different reasons: Robert because Sarah's lack of sophistication makes her a better "audience" for the conversations of which he is the subject; Christopher Saxe, the thoroughly likable young journalist, keeps the hedge from burning because he realises that Sarah's charm comes from her innocence of worldliness, coquetry, guile.

The hedge in the story is both real and symbolic. Actually it is a very "solid, evergreen rampart twenty feet high" about Sarah's house; symbolically, it is the temper or more accurately the temperament of her father, for he never gets angry; in other words, never puts himself at a disadvantage. He is a professor in the university, a great scholar, a rationalist, a despiser of instinct, a rather Teutonic figure, it must be confessed, though such men occur here and there even in the best regulated countries. Sarah and her mother are passionately anxious for companionship, for people, for sociality, but Professor Cawthorne will not allow them to break through the hedge. Some one else might have languished eternally, but not Sarah. She is too lovely not to be found out; the two men in the story do it. It is a great credit to them and justifies Mrs. Cawthorne's apology in behalf of the male sex: "It is true, my dear, men are not much, but they are all we have in that line!" We recommend "The Starling," full of sly humor and shrewd bits of characterisation.

All on the sand.

All the ponies did steady work during the training yesterday morning. Silver Streak was in great form and should be near the champion. Castlewood did a steady 1¼ mile and finished the last ½ mile in 1.04, going very well indeed.

Mountain King, the Housebow Derby winner, did a fast mile in 2.13 4/5 with Mr. Burkill up. It is believed that the pony will be Mr. G. H. Pott's leger candidate.

Owing to the rain, the grass course was not opened yesterday, but the sand course was in good condition and quite fast.

Pond's Vanishing Cream

is based on one of the most valuable skin-softening substances ever discovered, a substance whose affinity for the skin is so great that the moment it is applied it "Vanishes" and never reappears, as do many other toilet preparations.

It is fragrant and refreshing, it imparts to the skin a delightful sensation of coolness and velvety smoothness.

A light touch of POND'S VANISHING CREAM before applying powder gives the complexion an exquisite texture and a soft velvety bloom which cannot be obtained with powder alone. It is the ideal finishing touch.

As a safeguard against the ill effects of sun, wind and weather, POND'S VANISHING CREAM is simply wonderful. It preserves the necessary skin pliancy, and in the case of sunburn, does much to prevent unsightly peeling.

We want you to know, not from what we say, but from actual experience, how good POND'S VANISHING CREAM is for your skin. You have read about it, heard about it; now we want you to use it.

Banking Service with AMERICA —direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about America?

Is Another Rubber Boom Likely?

(From Commerce, a weekly financial review published at Calcutta).

SINCE the great rubber boom of 1910, when the price of the raw material stood at more than 12s. per lb., the industry has passed through a variety of vicissitudes. When the war started in 1914, the trade seemed to be on the verge of another boom, for the world's consumption was steadily increasing while, on the other hand, the output of forest rubber was on the wane, there being no corresponding increase in the production of the plantation companies. With the advent of the war it was believed that the industry would derive distinct advantage from the enormous extra demand that sprang into being in connection with the many new scientific appliances that were employed by the belligerents. This would undoubtedly have been the case had it not been for the dearth of tonnage which made exports impossible except for military purposes coupled with the ban on luxuries which eventually supervened. The Excess Profits Tax fell more heavily upon the plantation companies especially upon the young ones than upon any other branch of British industry; and we may take it, therefore, that the trade has a long way yet to go before it can throw off all the disabilities that the war placed upon it, to emerge eventually, as it must do sooner or later, into the period of unexampled prosperity that lies ahead.

Whether we shall again see raw rubber quoted in the market at 12s a lb. is exceedingly questionable That it may soon recover to 4s. or even to 5s. is, however, a likely proposition, and as the companies, by their remarkable methods of cutting down costs, have managed not only to keep their heads above water but even to show handsome profits while rubber has remained at rates which seem by comparison almost ridiculous, it requires no exaggeration to predict remarkably fine results when the commodity market makes its anticipated forward move. Last year, during the most critical period of the great crisis, the industry suffered a serious set-back owing to the restriction of output and to the additional reduction of shipping facilities. There was something like a panic, indeed, in the raw rubber market. Matters were made worse by ill-organised measures for restricting the output and by panicky statements as to what would happen to the industry if somebody—preferably the Government—did not come promptly to its assistance. It was rather a new thing for any British industry to play the cry-baby in this fashion, but the rubber market ever since its early days has always been particularly subject to scares. At one time the possibility of the production of a synthetic substitute was the periodical bogey. Later came the theory that the output from the plantations was bound to exceed the limits of consumption.

Throughout these fluctuations the outstanding feature has been that those who paid no attention to the scaremongers have fared on the whole remarkably well. Fortunes were made in the last big rubber boom and lost in the slump which followed. But investors who purchased, say, Linggis ten years ago and paid no heed to market movements would have no cause to grumble at the record of their investment either from the point of view of dividends or capital appreciation. To a lesser extent the same thing could be said of nearly all the plantation companies in the Malay States, Ceylon and the Dutch East Indies, the proportion of failures from natural causes being small. But plantation companies, while forming good lock-up investments, provided that the high yield they give is recognised as a sign that provision should be made against possible capital loss, are not a very safe medium for speculation—firstly, because they are always liable to "scares," which, after all, sometimes do prove to be well-founded, and secondly, owing to the comparatively narrow market for the shares, the average capital of the companies being relatively small.

The investing public are now asking themselves the question: Are quotations likely to advance; are we in for another boom; or will raw rubber remain low with a resultant lack of vitality in the share market? A reply to the conundrum should be found ere long; for the demand is there no doubt: it is indeed increasing; and we shall presently be able to decide whether there is any prospect of any big advance in the near future in the price of the raw material. Early last month standard plantation rubber was down to about 1s. 10d. per pound, and it his been even lower towards the close. Considering the increase in costs and the rise in exchange this left a smaller margin of profit than ever before in the history of the industry, except for a short period last year, especially as the Eastern markets are also in a depressed condition owing to the slackening off of the American demand and some fear of a shortage of freight, for which, however, there does not seem much reasonable ground.

Stocks in the United Kingdom have been gradually increased until at the end of June they totaled 25,600 tons, or more than double the figure at the corresponding date last year and while the home trade has been rather more active of late imports have still continued to exceed deliveries, with the result of a further enhancement of stocks. Plantation rubber for this month's delivery is now quoted at 2s. 1½d., and whether the price is to be still further advanced depends a good deal on the prospective German demand now that the blockade has been lifted. How much will the off-take in this direction be? It is admitted, of course, that Germany is practically bare of rubber; that there is no effective substitute for many purposes, and certainly none that is anything like so cheap, even if the price were double that at which it now stands, while it may fairly be presumed that the influx of raw materials following upon the raising of the blockade will restart the machinery of German industry. The annual imports of rubber into Germany before the war averaged about 21,000 tons, but it is probable that it will be some time before this trade is built up again. On the other hand, there are no internal stocks to work upon, and consequently it may fairly be expected that the initial orders are likely to be large; if, that is to say, German buyers are able to obtain sufficient credit for their operations. If, however, a full half-year's supply were taken up almost immediately the stocks left in England would still be considerable. Purchases for the Continent must, at any rate, be very large; and there seems to be good reason for anticipating that prices will rank much higher than is now the case at the end of this year or at the commencement of the next, with a resultant improvement in the market value of rubber investments.

In support of this prediction, it may be mentioned that, according to recent advices, the activity in the rubber tire manufacturing industry in the United States is far in excess of anything previously witnessed. Carefully compiled estimates indicate that for the new cars to be turned out next year 14,000,000 tires will be required, while existing cars will need a further 20,000,000 tires for the same period. The import of rubber into the United States has latterly undergone marked expansion. The future should witness a still more remarkable development. The foregoing rather forces the conclusion that an era of phenomenal prosperity in the rubber manufacturing world will be quickly followed by greatly improved conditions in the cultivated rubber industry. Manufacturers are in the fortunate position of being able to secure their raw material at a record low price and to sell their goods at a much enhanced level. It is clear, however, that the world's stocks will, at the present rate of consumption, undergo fairly rapid depletion, when an upward move in the price of raw rubber will surely follow. A little patience during further period of possible fluctuation in the commodity market should amply reward investors in all sound rubber-producing companies.

French Artists Unionising

Trade-unionism is in prospect for all the arts in France. In Paris the high cost of everything an artist or writer needs is driving him to take some means like collective bargaining to escape extinction. Not long since we read that Paris would be the future bourn of the student, since none from an Allied country would go again to Germany. Those already on the ground, however, are blue enough over the present conditions to predict even the passing away of Montmartre as a center of student life. Such is the picture presented by Sisley Huddleston in the London Daily Chronicle:

"Often the artist is poor, and he is hit very badly not only by the increased cost of living, but by the higher price that is demanded for the tools of his trade.

"From these two districts of Paris I have received a great number of complaints from my poor artist friends. How are they going to begin again, they ask, when paints are so expensive? Before the war their stock in trade was an item which they need not seriously consider. Now a piece of canvas has augmented in value to an unheard-of extent. Oil colors and artists' material in general stand at an impossible figure.

"Add to this the fact that an atelier can not be had except at a rent which is prohibitive, and you have some idea of the perturbation that is experienced in the artistic circles of Paris. Many of these young men and women are, of course, French, but it is a cosmopolitan world of art in which English and Spanish and Italian and American painters meet in happy confraternity.

"The case of the sculptor is even worse. I know a young Italian who is just beginning to 'arrive.' He has just been compelled to pay over 6,000 francs for a block of marble which would probably have been obtainable for 1,500 francs some years ago. In order to execute such orders as he has he is obliged to pay a workman £8 a week. He manages to keep going, but what of his penniless comrades who are just beginning again after the war?

"No wonder that they are talking of forming a trade-union of artists. Exactly what they would do if they were banded together, against whom they could revolt, is hard to see. The same desire to form trade-unions is to be found even among the writers and 'intellectuals' generally. In a famous cafe of the Quarter poets and novelists have held many meetings. It is useless to point out that there can not be an eight-hour day for the poet. It is wasting words to suggest that the novelist can hardly go on strike. In spite of these obvious truths they want to join the Confederation Generale du Travail.

"The decision of the publishers to raise the selling-price of books from 3 francs 50 centimes to 7 francs is no doubt commercially justified, but from the point of view of the young French writer it is disastrous. How is he going to make himself known? Who will buy his books? The public can deprive itself more easily of books than of sugar, and doubtless will not care overmuch. Such authors as Anatole France, Henri Bordeaux, and Maurice Barres will always find purchasers, but the little community at Montparnasse and at Montmartre, who work conscientiously and who hope some day to find their merits recognised, are plunged in consternation. For them the book at 7 francs is the end of all things.

"If Paris really finds its artistic and literary centers wiped out it will, indeed, be a strange Paris. Doubtless many of the members of the little coteries are without great value, but it should not be forgotten that out of them emerge the men who keep the French spirit alive, who carry on the torch of European civilisation. It is a grave matter, not only for them but for the world."

Wilson Shows England Has Not Six Votes To Our One

(New York Times)

Los Angeles, September 21.—President Wilson apparently has won the majority of the people of California over to the League of Nations, and advocates of the treaty and the league here, representing all political factions, confidently predict that if a vote were taken tomorrow, the result in the State would be at least two to one for the acceptance of the President's program, without drastic reservations.

Those who have watched the situation here closely say the President has done two things which have served most to advance the cause of the treaty in California. The first has been the explanation of the Shantung agreement, by which he dissociated the agreement from the question of the extension of Japanese land holdings in California. The second was his explanation of the fact that Great Britain and her colonies have six votes in the League of Nations Assembly and the United States but one. His emphasis of the fact that the Assembly is only a "debating society" and that all decisions rest with the Council, in which Great Britain has only one vote, as has the United States, made a very deep impression.

The full text of the President's explanation on this question of voting, made here last night, is as follows:

"Another thing that is giving some of our fellow-countrymen pangs of some sort, pangs of jealousy perhaps, is that, as they put it, Great Britain has six votes in the League and we have only one. Well, our one vote, it happens, counts just as heavily as if every one of our States were represented and we had forty-eight because it happens, though these gentlemen have overlooked it, that the Assembly is not an independent voting body. Great Britain has only one representative and one vote in the Council of the League of Nations which originates all action, and its six votes are in the Assembly, which is a debating and not an executive body, and in every matter on which the Assembly can vote along with the Council it is necessary that all the nations represented on the Council should concur in the affirmative vote to make it valid: so that in every vote, no matter how many vote for it in the Assembly, in order for it to become valid, it is necessary that the United States should vote ay.

"Now, inasmuch as the Assembly is a debating body, that is the place where this exposure that I have talked about to the open air is to occur, it would not be wise for anybody to go into the Assembly for purposes that will not bear exposure, because that is the great cooling process of the world, that is the great place where gases are to be burned off. I ask you in debating the affairs of mankind, would it have been fair to give Panama a vote, as she will have, Cuba a vote, both of them very much under the influence of the United States, and not give a vote to the Dominion of Canada, to that great energetic Republic in South Africa, to that place from which so many liberal ideas and liberal actions have come, that stout little Commonwealth of Australia? Why, when I was in Paris, the men I could not tell apart except by their hats, were the Americans and the Australians. They both had the swing of fellows who say, 'The gang is all here, what do we care?' Could we deny a vote to that other little self-governing nation, for it practically is such in everything but its foreign affairs, New Zealand, or, last but not least, to those toiling, I was about to say uncounted, millions in India. Would you vote to deprive these great committees of a voice in the debate? Why, my fellow citizens, it is a proposition which has never been stated, because to state it answers it.

'THEY CANNOT OUT-VOTE US'

"But they cannot out-vote us. If we, as I said a minute ago, had forty-eight votes in the Assembly, they would not count any more than our one, because they would have to be combined, and it is easier to combine one than to combine forty-eight. The vote of the United States is potential to prevent anything the United States does not care to approve. All this nonsense about six votes and one vote can be dismissed and you can sleep with perfect quiet. In order that I may not be said to have misled you, I must say that there is one matter upon which the Assembly can vote and which it can decide by a two-thirds majority without the concurrence of all the States represented in the council, and that is the admission of new members to the League."

Evidence of the State's turnover to the Wilson point of view has beeen cumulative since the President entered California last Wednesday and found aligned with him, so far as the Treaty of Peace was concerned, a large number of the dyed-in-the-wool Republican party leaders, many of the leaders of the Progressive elements, including close friends of Senator Johnson, and practically all of the Democratic leaders. Senator Johnson still holds very strong personal popularity, but the President's appearance here, and his charges that Johnson and other Republican Senators have misrepresented the facts to the people, have momentarily weakened Senator Johnson's position to a certain extent.

President Wilson and the treaty proponents decided today to stop the Presidential train at Sacramento, the home town of Senator Johnson, tomorrow morning, long enough for Mr. Wilson to address the people there.

Among those who urged this decision was Ben S. Allen, editor of The Sacramento Union, right hand man of Herbert Hoover during the war period, who stated that the Shantung agreement had been openly misrepresented to the people by the opposition that a repetition of the exposition which the President here, would accomplish good. It is asserted that enemies of the League, including the friends of Johnson, endeavored to confuse in public mind the principles volved in the Shantung agreement and the danger of this State ing further invaded by the Japanese.

CALIFORNIA NO STUMBLING BLOCK

The progress which has made here by President W has been accepted as of the most importance in the national wide League fight, as it had predicted that in California sident Wilson would find a stumbling block which would seriously threaten his cause. There has been little or no evidence during the President's visit, however, that the opposition to the treaty had reached such proportions in California.

The situation found here—strong sentiment for the quick ratification of the treaty without destructive reservations—adds to the cumulative evidence, found in all of the States the President has visited up to this time, that the nation is not prepared to take a stand for treaty rejection. As nearly as may be judged, the mass of the people would vote for the acceptance of the treaty on a non-political and non-partisan basis if the question were put to a referendum. The sentiment for reservations has been pretty strong in some sections, but it has been largely for reservations which might be looked upon as a compromise between the attitude of the President for adoption of the treaty without any additions whatsoever and the attitude of some of the Senators for changes which, the President asserts, would destroy the treaty.

President Wilson's reception in Los Angeles was one of the most generous he has received on the tour, and the meeting at the Shrine Auditorium last night received with warm approval his statements concerning the Shantung agreement, Great Britain's six votes in the Assembly of the League, and other features of the treaty and covenant. It was a thoroughly representative audience, made up of all classes of people, many of whom had waited hours to hear the President. The attitude at the meeting was as friendly as that of the great crowds, estimated as high as 400,000, which greeted the President during the street parade in the afternoon.

It is possible that Senator Johnson might win the State away from the attitude favorable to treaty ratification if he came here but the League of Nations adherents hold that the tide has turned too strongly in favor of the treaty to be checked now. Many of the close friends of Senator Johnson, who will follow him if the opportunity arises to obtain his nomination for President next year, are opposed to his attitude on the League.

There have been a number of evidences of the effect the President's appearance has had on the League of Nations question, and one of these much talked of in Los Angeles today, is the change in the attitude of Mrs. Florence Collins Porter, one of the five women attached to the Republican National Committee. Mrs. Porter was put in charge of the work among the women of the Western tier of States, including California, Utah, Arizona, Nevada, and Washington, and holds a prominent place in public life.

In The Los Angeles Examiner, the Hearst newspaper, this morning Mrs. Porter was quoted as having sent a message to the Women's League, which meets at San Francisco this afternoon, entering a protest against Article X. of the League covenant. This morning Mrs. Porter sent this telegram to Mrs. William B. Franklin, Chairman of the Woman's League:

"'Am quoted in a Los Angeles morning newspaper as opposed to Article X., but otherwise in favor of the League of Nations. I heard President Wilson's address last night, and his presentation convinced me that the treaty should be ratified quickly as it stands, including Article X. I ask that this statement be read at the meeting this afternoon."

The charge has been heard here that there has been misrepresentation on both the Shantung and British six votes questions by various elements among the League of Nations opponents. The Hearst newspapers, which like nothing better than to take a crack at England and to agitate the Japanese question, are strongly anti-Wilson. It has been difficult for the people to obtain any grasp from what has been printed, prior to this time, upon the fundamentals involved in these two questions.

The League proponents here hold that President Wilson has satisfied the great majority of the people on both of the points raised, and that the support for the League of Nations will grow rather than diminish as the public has an opportunity to digest more carefully his explanations.

The local newspapers have given the President's visit to California pages of publicity and have carried practically all of his addresses in this State, in full. Even the Hearst newspapers have stated that the President received big demonstrations and have printed his addresses.

The Japanese issue is one of the things which have served to give Senator Johnson wide popularity with the people of the State, as he is looked upon as a man who, as President, would bend every effort to prevent the further [illegible] is [illegible] in [illegible] on [illegible] to [illegible] re- [illegible] ns [illegible] es. [illegible] he [illegible] ns [illegible] the President in regard to the League, do not hesitate to say that they are in no sense expressing their feelings as to how California will stand where political issues are involved.

It is probably a fact that the leaders of political faiths other than that of President Wilson, will turn to and do their best to defeat him or any other Democrat who may run for the Presidency next year. There is without doubt a very strong undercurrent against President Wilson personally in many quarters, and a large number, of men and women of the Republican party who believe that he might have put a more representative Republican or Republicans on the Peace Commission. But for the moment they are prepared to drop this matter and leave for decision, at the polls, and after the Treaty of Peace is out of the way, the questions which directly involve President Wilson as a possible third-term nominee and the fate of the Democratic party in California in 1920.

The non-partisan feature of the League of Nations issue here is best illustrated by naming some of the Republicans and Progressive Republicans who have announced themselves as pro-League and who joined in promoting the meetings here to advance its cause. First among them, perhaps, comes Chester C. Rowell, of Fresno, who has been and is now with Senator Johnson on all matters political but not with him in his stand on the League. Rowell, who presided at the San Francisco meeting to boost the League, says that Johnson still retains his grip on the affections of the people of the State and will get nearly 100 per-cent support as a Presidential candidate.

Another who is for the League, but who will fight Wilson or any other Democratic Presidential nominee, is A. J. Wallace, who was Johnson's running mate in 1910, when Johnson was elected Governor, and served as Lieutenant Governor. Still another is Marshall Stimson, manager of the Johnson campaign of 1910. Johnson H. Crall, Vice Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, is another advocate of the league. Another Johnson man, but a league advocate, is Dr. John R. Haynes, known here as the father of the referendum and recall; another, G. H. Wright, Republican Speaker of the Assembly.

These men have no desire to see the personal cause of President Wilson advanced. In fact, most of them are bitterly antagonistic in regard to much which he has done, and will do everything in their power to turn this State back to the Republican Party in 1920, with considerably more than an even chance of success, it would seem.

It is not a Wilson popularity contest in any sense of the word, so far as the leaders of any faction of the Republican Party are concerned, and nobody knows that any better than Mr. Wilson. There are a good many men now taking a stand for the league, who might fairly be classed as "Wilson haters."

But there is running through the minds of many of the Republican leaders, and not a few of them have expressed it to The York Times correspondent, that Senator Johnson and a few of the other Republican Senators have taken a stand which is a bit too strong for the future welfare of the Republican Party and that the best thing to do is to help get the treaty adopted on a basis which will come as a compromise in regard to representations—a basis which the Republicans could claim as being beneficial to the nation and for which they could take the credit.

A fact worthy of comment is that that there has not appeared here in such strength as had been anticipated in some quarters the anti-League of Nations spirit, as represented by the Friends of Ireland and other groups of agitators. These groups are strongest in San Francisco, but they did not prove a disturbing factor and it seems probable that the mass of people are not in sympathy with their ideas. This has been noticeable, also, in the other States through which the President has passed. Group agitation apparently has not gained an ascendency which could prove dangerous to the League.

The attacks which have been made in the Hearst newspapers against President Wilson personally have not been without their effect among some elements of the people, but it is by no means the predominating note. This feeling is largely apart from the League of Nations proposal.

The President spent the day resting. He attended church in the morning. The Presidential train left at 7 o'clock tonight on its way to Reno, Nev.

Judge Them Not By Their Names

BY S. E. KISER

There's cold reserve in Pansy's glance,
  She lacks the tricks of sprite or fay;
Her joyful parents guessed, perchance,
  That she was destined to be gay.
  They may have thought her born to play
Through life with easy carelessness.
  She lectures solemnly for pay—
How often names are meaningless.

If Constance had been rightly named
  There should be no complaint from me.
No lovely woman ever claimed
  Such charms as hers, or learned to be Less constant or more fancy free.
A hundred aching hearts possess
  The scars of her inconstancy—
How often names are meaningless.

I have no wish to slander Grace;
  Her virtues may be superfine,
But she is wide across the face
  And of a barrel-like design.
  She runs to volume, not to line!
If she has graces, I confess,
  I'm glad they're hers instead of mine—
How often names are meaningless.

Friends, do not think Virginia, Flo,
  Or Magdalene, or Ruth, or Bess
Means anything at all. You know
  How often names are meaningless.

Little Bobbie's Pa — By William F. Kirk

Pa was laying on his back on the grass under a tree in our yard.

He was looking up at the Sky & whisseling.

You are straingely happy & peeceful this eve, sed Ma to Pa. What has caim oaver yure di-nam-mick spirit? sed Ma.

I am in the lap of Nater, sed Pa, what is so rare as a day in August?

I think it is almost too hot to live, sed Ma.

That is alto-gether in ones Mental attytood, sed Pa. If yure mind is on cool things, like cucumbers early in the morning, you will be cool. Or think of a cake of ice, Pa said, reeposing in the ice box surrounded by ginger ale, the new drink of the Nashun, Pa sed. If that dosent cool you, reed a book about the North Poal.

I have tried all that, sed Ma, but the fack reemains that this is distress-ingly warm weather. I wonder if the sun is gitting neerer the wurld on wich we live on, sed Ma.

Not at all, sed Pa. If it was, sed Pa, I wud be one of the first to notic it, me & Mister Serviss. No, sed Pa, you are simply warm beekauss you let yourself think of the warm day. My mind soars above them Petty trifels, sed Pa. I am a good lot like Mister Sokratees, the old Greek gink. He had a grate noodle, sed Pa, him and me looked at Life different than what most peepul does. So I am cool, sed Pa, & I hoap Mister Sockratees is cool where he is now. I certingly hoap so, said Pa.

I notis yure collar is all wilted down, sed Ma. I suppoas yure mind cuddent prevent that.

I like my collars that way, sed Pa. Wen the starch is out of them they feel cooler on the neck. Wimmen dress too warm, sed Pa.

Why, sed Ma, the vary idee. I am dressed much cooler than you are. Jest this littel thin frock, etc., sed Ma.

I reemember how cool you used to look wen I went calling on you, sed Pa. I can see you now, sed Pa, all in white with yure cheeks pink like rose pettals, waiting at the gate & praying for me to cum around the corner and waiv at you, sed Pa. I was certainly the appel of yure eye in them days, sed Pa.

Ma laffed. Yes, deer, she sed to Pa, I was foolish about you. In fack, sed Ma, my parents thot I was foolish to have you calling at all, sed Ma. But time showed that my girlish judgment was rite, sed Ma. But I remember, Ma sed, that in those days you dident look so cool & comfortabel as what you do now, thare on the grass.

I reemember how you used to be all the time mopping yure noable brow with yure hankerchief. You used to borrow Father's hankerchiefs, too, sed Ma, but he dident cair beekaus he knew you were going to be one of the fambly & he cud borrow them bak.

I always had lots of hankerchifs & clothes in them days, dident I, sed Pa. I was a swell appeerer, wasent I? Strate as a arrow & quik as a panther, sed Pa.

Oh, deer, sed Ma, it is nevver too hot for you to throw bokays at yure noabel self. & then Ma went & made sum lemmunade & Pa drank neerly all of the pitcher.

The Cause Of The Cold That Aeronauts Encounter

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

"Why is it that when an aviator goes up 25,000 feet, more or less, he finds the temperature, say, 25 degrees below zero, although on the earth, at the same time, it is probably 90 degrees or more? This, I presume, a good many would like to know.—J. F. M."

The principal cause of the lower temperature found at great altitudes is the rarity of the air at those heights. At 25,000 feet above tide the density of the air is only about two-fifths as great as at sea level. The weight of the air is due to the attraction of the solid globe of the earth, and being very compressible as well as elastic its lower layers are squeezed into a smaller space and so made more compact than the upper ones.

Now, the air is warmed both by the direct rays of the sun passing through it and by the heated surface of the earth beneath. In Winter, when the sun runs low through our sky and when the surface of the earth is frozen, the air becomes very cold even at the bottom. Then northwest winds that have passed over vast snow-covered regions chill us.

But Winter or Summer the air is colder at great heights than at the surface of the earth; only in Winter, owing to loss of the heat derived from the ground, the difference of temperature between the lowest and highest levels of the atmosphere is less than in Summer.

People are often puzzled to understand why the temperature does not increase instead of diminishing as one goes higher in the air, and so, as they say, "nearer to the sun." The change in distance from the sun by rising a few miles from the earth's surface is altogether insignificant and the effect on the temperature is imperceptible, because that change amounts to an extremely small fraction of the sun's distance, which is about 90,000,000 miles.

But, as already said, in rising only about five miles the density of the air falls to about two fifths of its value at sea-level, and this thin air naturally cannot receive and retain from the rays passing through it as much heat as does the far denser air below. It is something like the difference between a thin blanket and a thick one. Then, too, the thin air does not prevent the radiation of heat from the body as dense air does. Of course, the sun's rays are just as "hot," i.e., just as capable of developing heat in objects that they touch at a high elevation as at a low one, but when the heat thus derived is instantly radiated away, as happens in very thin air, the body has no time to become warmed.

On a high mountain peak your hands and face may be fiercely sunburned while your body shivers with cold. The deep masses of perpetual snow that crown all mountains three or four miles high show the effect of the thinness of the air at such elevations. In open space a man would freeze solid in full sunshine.

But the rate of falling off of the temperature with increase of height is not exactly the same as that of the decrease of atmospheric density. Near the ground the change of temperature in rising is approximately uniform for a short distance. Thus, generally speaking, the Fahrenheit thermometer shows a falling off of about one degree for every 350 feet of ascent. And up to a height of about a mile and a quarter from sea-level the decrease of temperature is slow.

Then the change becomes progressively more rapid until a height of something over six miles is reached, above which, as shown in a former article, the decrease of temperature ceases entirely, and even, in some cases, is reversed, giving place to a slight increase.

The distribution of moisture in the atmosphere has much to do with the variations of temperature. Aqueous vapor acts as a kind of trap for the heat below, and this action is suspended in the very high regions above the cloud levels, where the air is dry. The relative specific moisture in the air at about five miles elevation is less than four percent of its amount at sea-level.

Siccawei Weather Report

21.—Very high pressures in China. They cause a correspondent cold and the formation of clouds, with a little rain at several places. The depression of the Sea of Japan crosses Hokkaido and N. Nippon; the typhoon of the Pacific passes W. of and very near the Bonin; the one of Annam has landed between Tourane and Saigon, probably with destructive effects. In the evening, the Bonin typhoon recurves towards the N.E.

CHEFOO BIDS FAREWELL TO AMERICAN CONSUL

Mr. And Mrs. Maynard Take With Them Best Wishes Of All; Go To Egypt

(China Press Correspondence)

Chefoo, October 15.—This afternoon, Consul and Mrs. Maynard left Chefoo. Mr. Maynard has been transferred to Alexandria and he carries with him the sincere wishes of American and Allied nationals resident here. It has been impossible to reside in Chefoo since the appointment of Mr. Maynard as American Consul without being cognisant of his multifarious activities on behalf of the best interests of the port. He was highly thought of, not only by his own nationals but by all with whom he came into contact. After the departure of the German Consul, Mr. Maynard became the Senior Consul of Chefoo. It will not quickly be forgotten how heartily he threw himself into the Armistice celebrations, advising and suggesting ideas for the better commemoration of that historic event. To his efforts largely was the unique success attributable. Then again, the last three Independence Days were fed letter ones in local history. These again had the hall mark of Mr. Maynard's efficiency stamped upon them. Not the least of his public duties well performed, was his organisation of everything connected with the local Chapter of the Red Cross Society. The Chefoo Chapte has done splendidly, both in the way of the work it has turned out and the money it has remitted to headquarters in America. And to Mr. Maynard is much credit due for the splendid results attained.

Mrs. Maynard took upon herself many of the social duties arising from the position of Consul's wife, being an exceedingly pleasant and popular hostess. They will be much missed and not only by their own circle of friends, Chefoo is the poorer for their transference. A large number of friends were on the jetty to see them go, and as the tender conveying them on board shoved off there was the firing of firecrackers so inevitable on these occasions.

Yesterday afternoon, the Committee of the Club entertained the community to afternoon tea on the Recreation Ground. It was the occasion of the presentation of the handsome prizes awarded to the successful tennis competitors. The clerk of the weather was not altogether kind, for the afternoon was rather cold. Still a large number assembled to see Miss Eleanor Sugden present the prizes. Mrs. Lea and Mr. Davis, Mrs. Sugden and Mr. Casey were the winners of the first and second American open tournaments, while Miss Eritzie Smith got the championship prize for the ladies singles and Mr. Cyril Smith the prize for the gentlemen's singles. Mr. Smith was not present to receive his prizes in person. He left here on Monday afternoon for Tsinanfu. He is with Andersen. Meyer & Co. and goes to join the branch of the firm there. A splendid tennis player, he will be much missed.

Mrs. John Hayes "kicked off" for the first games of the new Football Season on the C. I. M. Boys' School ground this afternoon. She is the wife of an "Old Boy" and her selection for starting the season was exceedingly popular, judging from the hearty cheers which were accorded her as she came off the field.

We are anticipating some good soccer contests in the near future. Speculation is rife as to the strength of the two elevens which usually try conclusions. The departure of the Customs trio, has prevented them from forming their own club, as they had intended. Although our three best soccer exponents have gone, there is no reason to think that the Settlement cannot put a good team in the field. The question is as to whether the School can produce an eleven to give the Settlement a contest. Enquiry at the School elicited the information that they only possess one Color man but this is nothing to go by, for the lads are apt to develop quickly and at this stage there is no way of telling how the matches are likely to go. Both ends seem keen to begin, so it will probably not be long before we hear that the first match has been arranged.
